Renowned photographer and architect Richard Neer captures the beauty and diversity of these architectural wonders in his stunning artbook, "Doors." This captivating volume, published by Rizzoli New York, takes readers on a globetrotting journey to explore the doors of cathedrals, palaces, castles, and humble homes.

Through Neer's lens, we witness the grandeur of ornate Renaissance portals, the intricate carvings of Gothic cathedrals, the vibrant colors of Moroccan archways, and the sleek lines of modern skyscrapers.

A Photographer's Eye for Architectural Detail

Neer's background in architecture informs his approach to photography, allowing him to capture the subtle details and nuances that define each door.

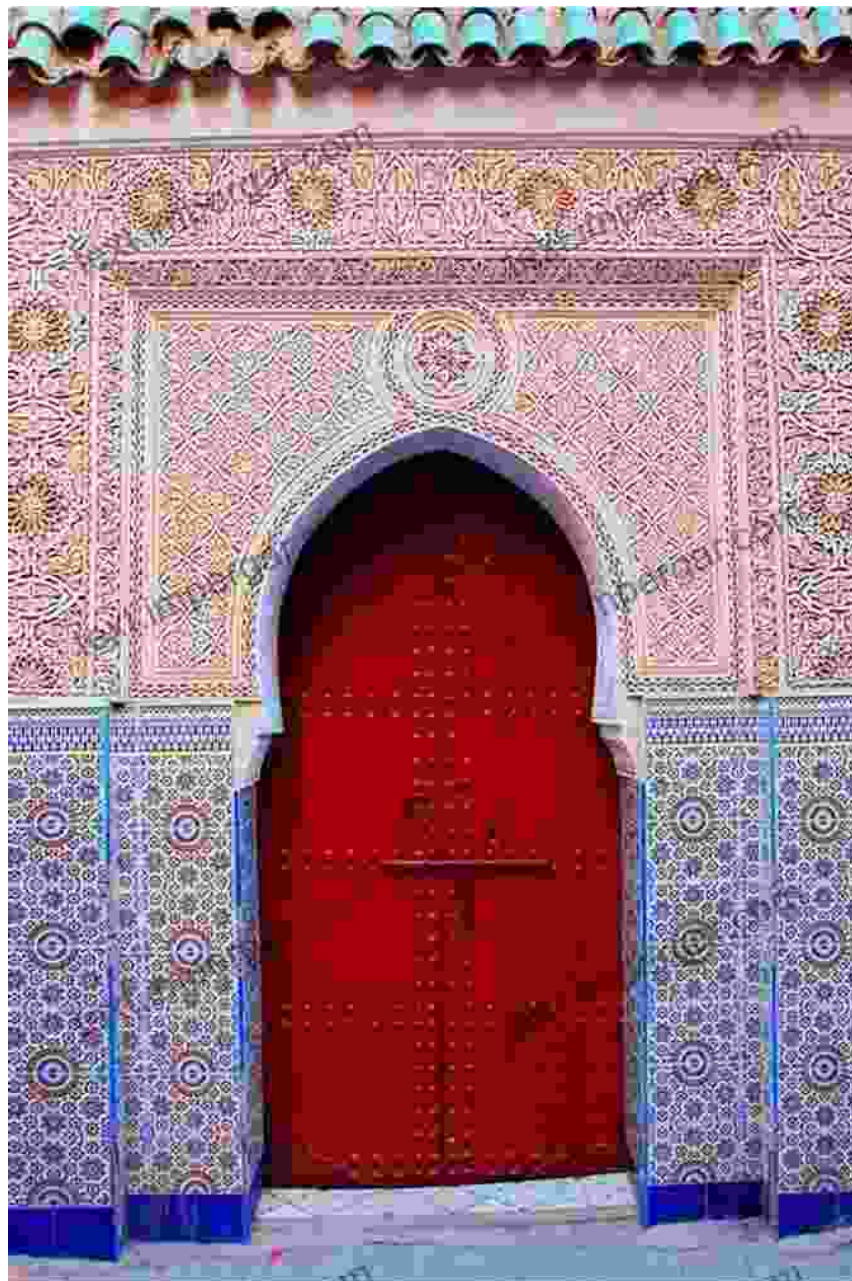

In his photographs, the play of light and shadow highlights the textures, patterns, and materials that make each door unique. From the weathered patina of ancient wooden doors to the gleaming surfaces of polished brass, Neer's images convey the tactile qualities of these architectural elements.

Doors as Cultural Artifacts

"Doors" invites readers not only to admire the aesthetic beauty of its subjects but also to contemplate their cultural significance.

The vibrant colors and intricate geometric patterns of this door reflect the cultural heritage of Morocco.

In his accompanying text, Neer explores the symbolic meanings and historical contexts of doors in different cultures. He reveals how doors have served as symbols of authority, protection, and transition throughout history.

Through these insights, we gain a deeper understanding of the role that doors play in shaping the social and cultural landscapes of our world.

A Visual Feast for Art and Architecture Enthusiasts

With its stunning photography and insightful text, "Doors" is a must-have for art enthusiasts, architecture lovers, and anyone who appreciates the beauty of the built environment.

The book's large format and high-quality printing showcase Neer's photographs at their best, allowing readers to fully immerse themselves in the beauty and artistry of these architectural wonders.

Richard Neer's "Doors" is an extraordinary artbook that captures the beauty, diversity, and cultural significance of doors around the world.
